

ABSTRACT

Microfluidic devices including one or more microstructures adapted to provide an indication of the extent and severity of collapse of channels and other microstructures within the device are provided. The channel collapse test structures do not communicate with operational 5 structures of the device, but are positioned and adapted to provide an indication of the structural integrity of similarly dimensioned operational structures.